A Note from the Editor

Embracing a New Horizon

The Asian Institute of Insurance (Aii) stands at the cusp of a new era. This transformation from the Malaysian Insurance Institute is not merely a change in name, but a natural progression reflecting our expanded role in the insurance landscape, particularly within the ASEAN region.

For over five decades, we have diligently worked to elevate professional standards within the Malaysian insurance industry, witnessing its evolution alongside the nation's own remarkable journey. Today, as Aii, we are poised to extend this impact far beyond our borders, embracing a broader vision of fostering insurance excellence across Asia.

This strategic rebranding is a significant milestone in our journey. It signifies our commitment to becoming a global leader in insurance education – setting new benchmarks for professional development in the region. The name “Asian Institute of Insurance” encapsulates our dedication to delivering world-class education and training solutions tailored to the unique needs of the broader Asian market.

We recognise that this transition comes with significant expectations. Aii is dedicated to exceeding these expectations by continuously elevating our solutions, processes, and service quality to align with global standards. We are committed to:

The journey towards becoming the leading insurance education and development institute in Asia has just begun, and we are excited to embark on it with you.

BANK NEGARA
MALAYSIA

It is with great pleasure that I extend my heartfelt congratulations to the Asian Institute of Insurance (Aii) on its remarkable transformation from the Malaysian Insurance Institute.

This evolution represents a significant milestone for Aii since its establishment in 1968, symbolising a bold vision and foresight in its journey to becoming a regional leader in insurance talent development. As we celebrate this achievement, it is important that we acknowledge the crucial role of the insurance and takaful sectors in fostering financial and socio-economic resilience. The industry provides essential protection for both businesses and individuals, acting as a financial safety net against unexpected losses.

The landscape, however, is evolving rapidly, presenting both challenges and opportunities which need to be addressed – from the increasing prevalence of cyber threats, growing threat of climate change and the complexities brought about by socio-economic and demographic shifts such as an ageing population and accelerated growth of the sharing economy. In navigating these dynamics, the industry stands at a critical juncture. The ability to drive innovations and lead efforts to advance the sector is paramount, requiring not only timely responses to current demands, but proactive actions to prepare for future challenges as well. Embracing digitalisation, enhancing risk modelling accuracy, and fostering collaboration across private and public sectors will be key in strengthening social safety nets and building capacity to address emerging risks such as climate change. On Bank Negara Malaysia's part, we remain committed to providing an enabling regulatory environment that promotes best practices, encourages innovation and supports the flourishing of new business models.

The industry must also mobilise its workforce. Elevating professionalism and upgrading technical skills are critical in maintaining trust and resilience in the insurance and takaful sectors. Aii will play an important role in this effort. By focusing on internationally recognised programmes and qualifications, Aii can bridge the gap between the current skills and future needs of the industry. With the recent launch of the Future Skills Framework (FSF) in July 2024, Aii is well positioned to lead the way in futureproofing and shaping the insurance industry, while nurturing the next generation of leaders. I am optimistic about the future, and I look forward to seeing Aii drive the insurance and takaful sector to greater heights.

Empowering Asia

The insurance landscape is evolving at an unprecedented pace, driven by technological advancements, shifting demographics, and a growing awareness of risk. To meet these challenges head-on and seize emerging opportunities, insurance professionals need access to world-class education and training that equips them with the knowledge, skills, and foresight to thrive in this rapidly evolving environment.

Enter the Asian Institute of Insurance (Aii) – ushering in a new era of insurance education and professional development in the region. Formerly known as the Malaysian Insurance Institute, the rebranding marks a significant milestone in its journey. “It reflects a natural progression, aligning with Aii’s expanded role and broader reach,” Paul H C Low, Aii’s CEO said. “This extends far beyond its Malaysian origins and into the heart of the ASEAN region and beyond.”

From Local Roots to a Global Vision

Established in 1968 as Pusat Latihan Insurans Malaysia, Aii has played a pivotal role in shaping Malaysia’s insurance landscape for over five decades. However, Aii’s commitment to excellence has not gone unnoticed beyond its borders. Over the past decade, Aii has steadily expanded its footprint across ASEAN and beyond, establishing a presence in nine countries globally and fostering a vibrant community of over 23,000 members.

“This growth is a testament to Aii’s dedication to delivering high-quality insurance education that resonates with professionals across geographical boundaries,” Low told the iN Magazine. “Aii’s commitment to global standards is further reinforced through its affiliations with prestigious international organisations such as the Chartered Insurance Institute in the United Kingdom and the Australian and New Zealand Institute of Insurance and Finance.”

Meanwhile, Aii’s influence extends beyond individual professional development. Through its sister company, the ASEAN Insurance Training and Research Institute (AITRI), Aii provides specialised training and research for ASEAN regulators, contributing to the development of robust and responsive regulatory frameworks within the region. Furthermore, Aii actively engages with the broader insurance community through biennial conferences, regional talent recognition awards, and impactful development programmes, fostering collaboration and knowledge sharing on a wider scale.

Embracing a New Identity, Reinforcing a Legacy of Excellence

The rebranding also represents a strategic move to position Aii as a global leader in insurance education. “The new name embodies Aii’s unwavering dedication to delivering world-class education and training solutions tailored to the specific needs of the broader Asian market,” Low said.

“This commitment to meeting the evolving needs of the industry is evident in Aii’s proactive approach to curriculum development and its recognition of the changing preferences of adult learners – understanding that today’s professionals juggle multiple commitments and seek flexible, efficient, and accessible learning options,” Low pointed out. As such, Aii has introduced a range of initiatives designed to enhance the learning experience:

Certification upon programme completion: Providing tangible recognition of acquired knowledge and skills, enhancing professional credibility and employability.

Reduced contact hours: Offering greater flexibility and convenience, allowing learners to balance their professional and personal commitments more effectively.

Monthly examination sessions: Facilitating faster progression through foundational certification courses, enabling learners to acquire essential knowledge and skills more efficiently.

Multiple-choice assessments: Streamlining the assessment process for core subjects, ensuring a fair and objective evaluation of knowledge acquisition.

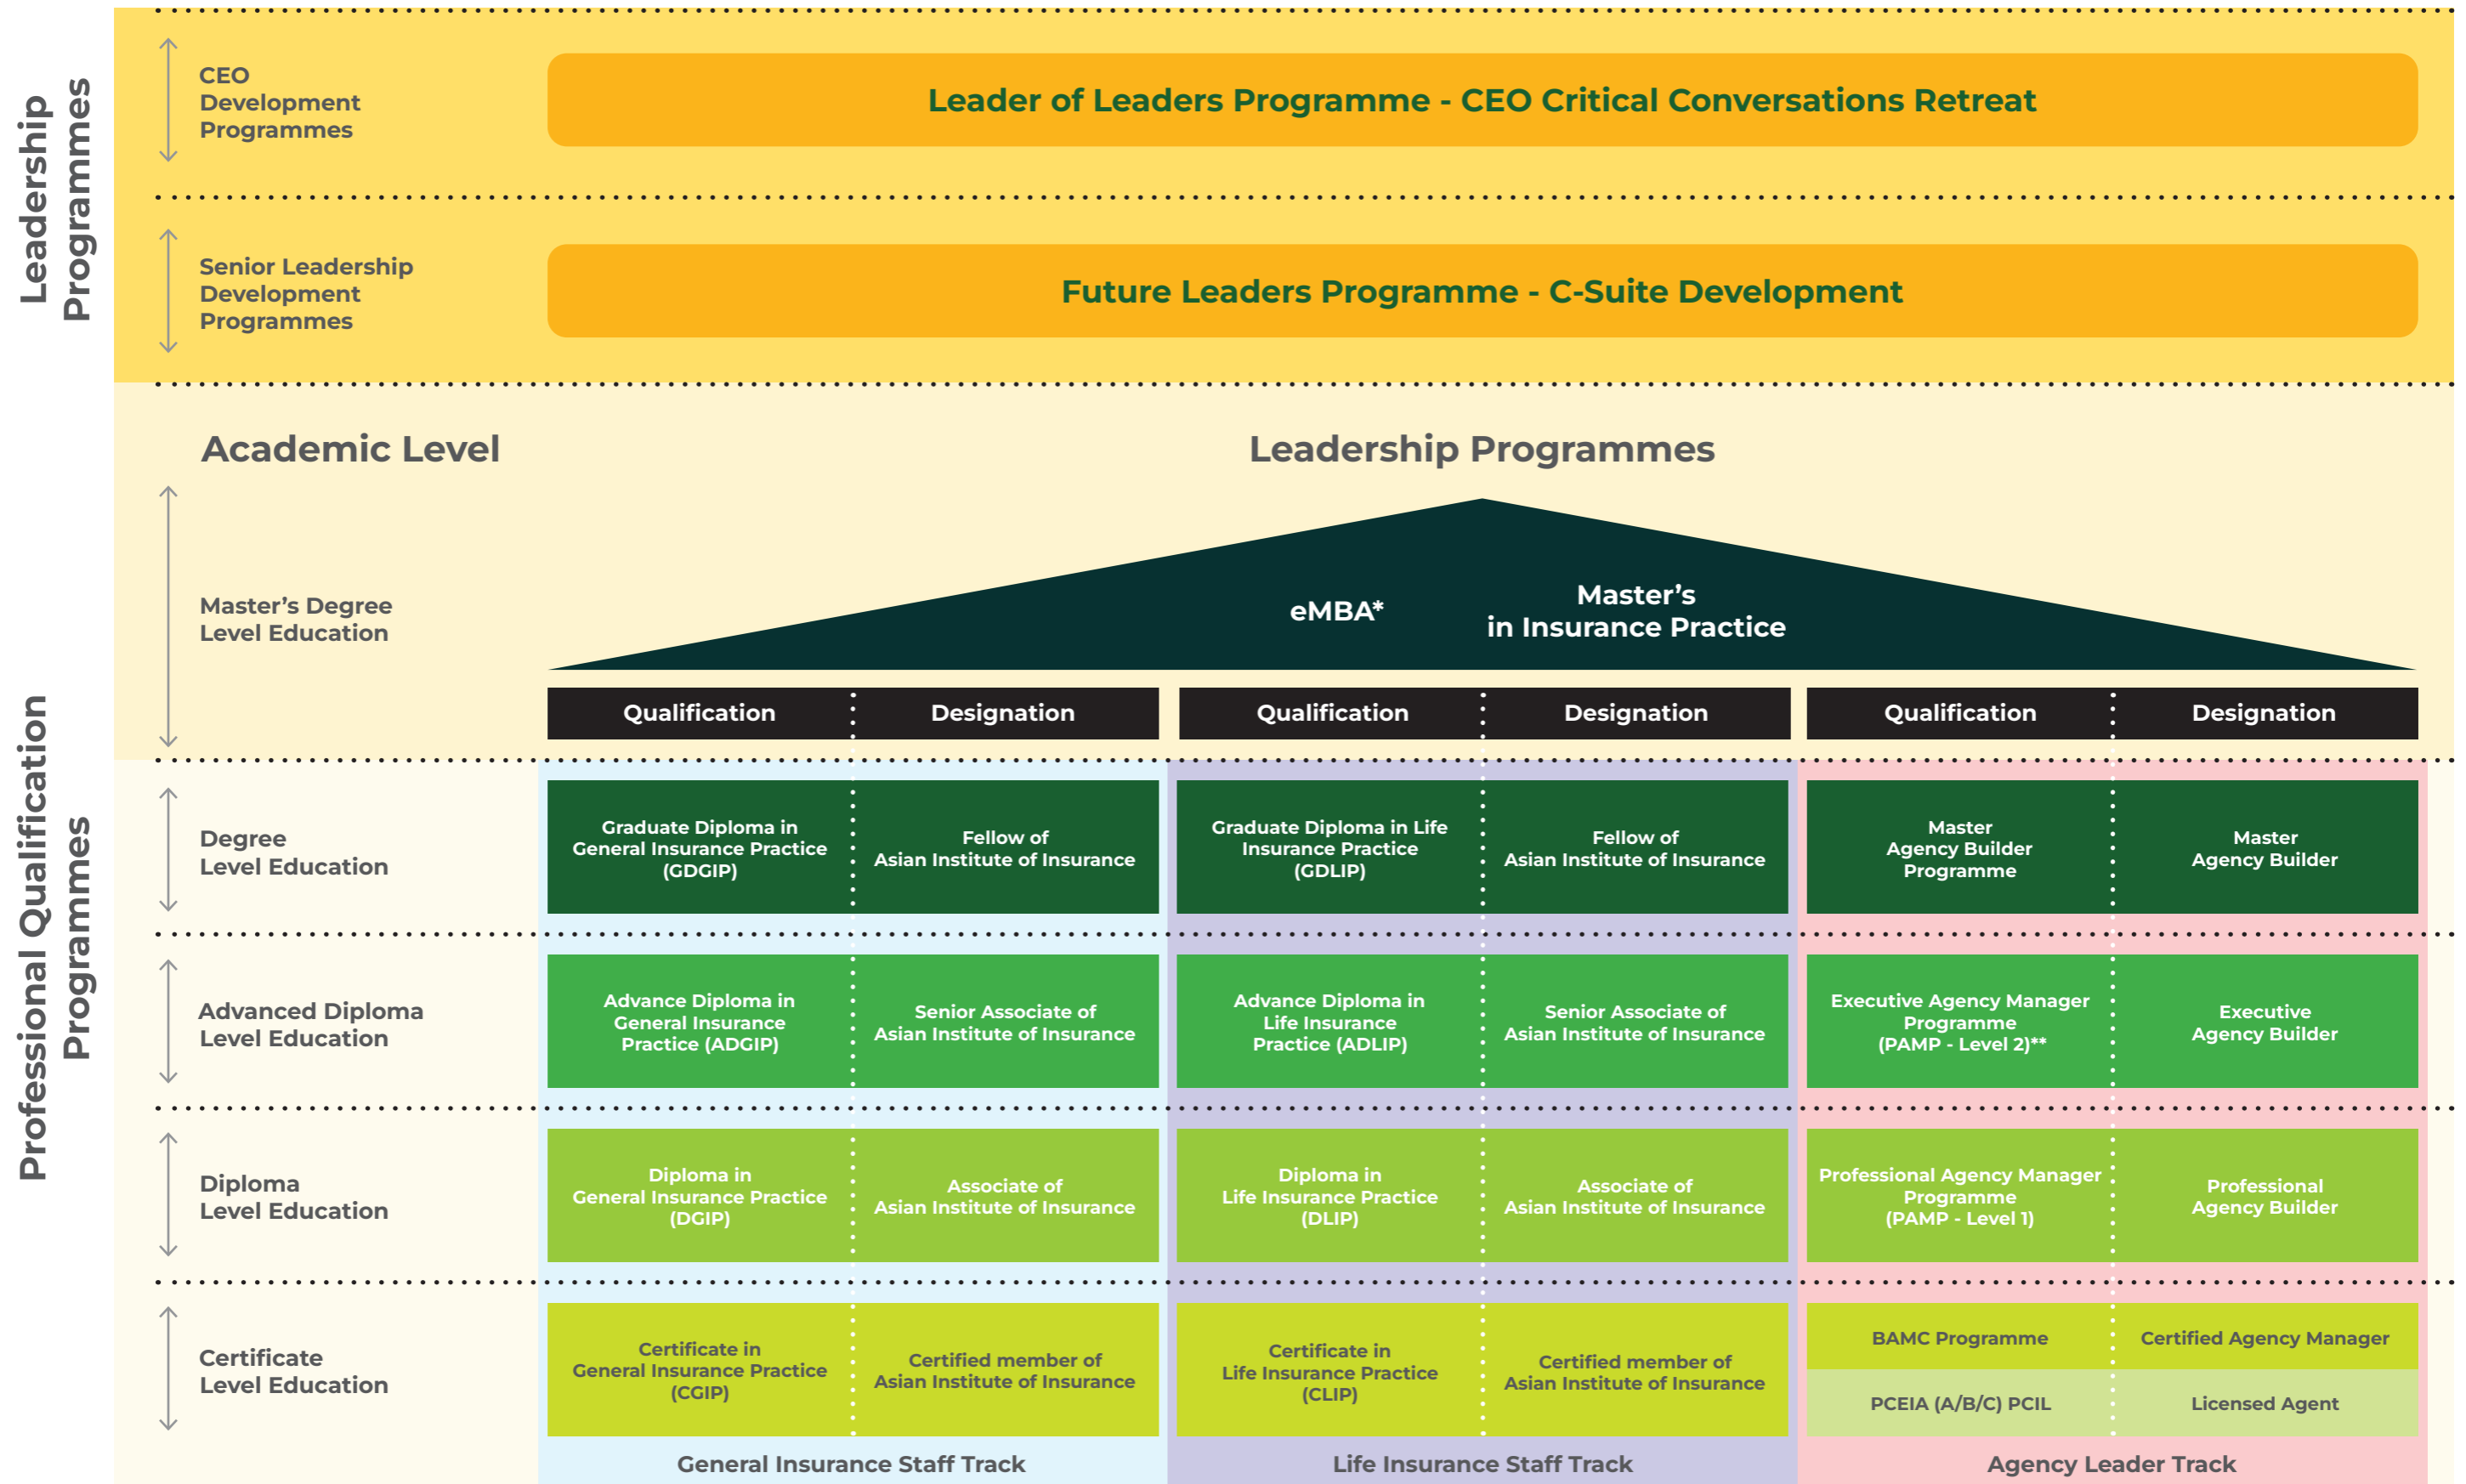

Blended assessment styles: Employing a variety of assessment methods for elective subjects, catering to diverse learning styles and providing a more comprehensive evaluation of understanding.

Championing Specialisation: General Insurance Practice and Life Insurance Practice

Recognising the distinct nature of General and Life insurance, Aii has taken steps to ensure that its programmes cater to the unique demands of each discipline, Low said. For instance, the AMII Programme for General Insurance has been renamed “General Insurance Practice,” reflecting a more focused and specialised approach to this critical area of the industry.

Furthermore, Aii is proud to introduce the Life Insurance Practice Professional Qualification Programme, a comprehensive programme designed to equip life insurance professionals with the knowledge and skills needed to excel in this dynamic field. “This updated programme offers localised content benchmarked against global standards, guiding students through a structured professional journey from certification to fellowship across 10 relevant and impactful subjects,” Low said.

Serving ASEAN Through AITRI

The ASEAN Insurance Training and Research Institute (AITRI) was established in September 2000 as part of ASEAN's efforts to restore confidence, regenerate economic growth, and promote regional financial stability within the insurance industry.

AITRI was officially incorporated on 1 December 2004, in Malaysia, with the Malaysian Insurance Institute being appointed as the Secretariat.

A Future Forged Through Collaboration and Innovation

As Aii embarks on this new chapter of its establishment, it remains committed to its core values of Resourcefulness, Integrity, Teamwork, and Excellence (RITE). These values, according to Low, serve as guiding principles to ensure that Aii continues to be a beacon of trust, professionalism, and innovation within the insurance industry.

Aii firmly believes that the future of insurance education lies in collaboration and a shared commitment to excellence, Low pointed out. By working closely with industry stakeholders, regulatory bodies, and educational institutions, Aii seeks to foster a vibrant ecosystem of knowledge sharing, innovation, and professional growth.

Empowering Agency Leaders

In the insurance industry, the agency force serves as a critical link between providers and the public. The effectiveness of this force hinges directly on the quality of leadership guiding it. Cognisant of this fact, Low said Aii is committed to upholding and enhancing professional standards for agency leaders in Malaysia through a comprehensive series of Professional Qualification Programmes (see accompanying chart for more details). "These programmes provide a structured development roadmap, equipping leaders with the skills and knowledge necessary to excel in a dynamic and evolving industry," he said.

Aii also acknowledges that the insurance and financial services sector is constantly evolving – demanding adaptable and knowledgeable leaders. Effective leadership is, hence, paramount to organisational success, requiring agency managers to possess a unique blend of skills.

Aii's Professional Qualification Programmes: A Pathway to Excellence

Aii offers a tiered approach to leadership development, Low said, catering to professionals at various stages in their careers – Professional Agency Manager Programme (PAMP) and the PAMP 2: Integrating Global Best Practices. They are meticulously designed to address these critical areas – providing agency leaders with the tools and knowledge to thrive in a competitive landscape (see accompanying chart for more details).

“The PAMP provides aspiring leaders with the opportunity to refine their leadership capabilities, inspire innovation, and cultivate future-ready talent, ensuring organisational success in the competitive insurance and financial services industry,” Low said. Meanwhile, the PAMP 2 provides a comprehensive and engaging learning experience, equipping agency leaders with practical skills and strategies to enhance their management capabilities.

Last, but not least, the Master Agency Builder Programme. Developed in collaboration with the prestigious Asia Business School, the MAB Programme targets experienced insurance agency leaders in Malaysia. This programme builds upon foundational leadership principles and business acumen, propelling participants towards mastery in agency management (see accompanying chart for more details). “The MAB Programme equips experienced leaders with the advanced skills and knowledge necessary to navigate the complexities of the evolving insurance landscape, ensuring continued success and leadership in a globalised marketplace,” Low said matter-of-factly.

Industry Recognition and Public Trust

“All Aii's Professional Qualification Programmes are complemented by industry-recognised designations, enabling the public to easily identify qualified leaders who are dedicated to serving their needs,” Low said. “These designations represent a mark of distinction, signifying a commitment to professional excellence and ethical conduct.”

As agency leaders progress through these development programmes, Low said they continually enhance their capabilities, preparing them to meet the challenges of a rapidly changing industry. "Aii's commitment to providing high-quality professional development opportunities for agency leaders will ultimately benefit not just the Malaysian public, but regional communities, ensuring they receive the highest level of service and expertise from the insurance industry," Low added.

Navigating the Future of ASEAN Insurance

Closer to home, the ASEAN insurance industry is at a pivotal juncture, facing a confluence of unprecedented challenges and opportunities. Rapid technological advancements, evolving customer expectations, and a dynamic regulatory landscape demand a new breed of leader – one equipped to navigate complexity, drive innovation, and shape the future of the industry.

The Future Leader Programme, an immersive five-day residential initiative, is specifically designed to empower ASEAN C-Suite insurance executives with the critical competencies needed to thrive in this evolving landscape, Low said. "This programme transcends traditional learning models, offering a unique blend of knowledge acquisition, collaborative problem-solving, and strategic foresight." The Future Leader Programme goes beyond theoretical knowledge, offering a unique hands-on learning experience. Participants will engage in a collaborative group project, tackling real-world industry challenges and developing innovative solutions. This culminates in a final presentation, allowing participants to showcase their acquired knowledge and strategic insights to their peers and industry experts (see accompanying chart for more details).

Leader of Leaders Retreat

For seasoned executives seeking to further elevate their leadership and shape the future of the ASEAN insurance industry, the Leader of Leaders Retreat offers an unparalleled opportunity. This exclusive five-day residential retreat is meticulously crafted for ASEAN insurance CEOs, providing a platform for high-level dialogue, strategic thinking, and transformative growth (see accompanying chart for more details).

"The Future Leader Programme and the Leader of Leaders Retreat represent invaluable investments in the future of ASEAN insurance leadership," Low succinctly pointed out. "By equipping executives with the skills, knowledge, and networks needed to thrive in a rapidly evolving landscape, these programmes will be shaping a new generation of leaders who will be prepared to navigate uncertainty, drive innovation, and secure a prosperous future for the industry. Quality education and continuous professional development are imperative going forward." 📌

Low: Aii's commitment to providing high-quality professional development opportunities for agency leaders will ultimately benefit not just the Malaysian public, but regional communities, ensuring they receive the highest level of service and expertise from the insurance industry.

The Future Skills Framework: Fortifying Malaysia's Financial Services Sector

The relentless pace of technological advancement, coupled with evolving economic landscapes, has placed a premium on future-ready skills across the globe. Malaysia, a nation with its sights set on achieving high-income status, recognised this impending need early on, leading to the emergence of the Future Skills Framework (FSF). This framework, a cornerstone of the nation's broader skills development agenda, aims to equip the Malaysian workforce with the competencies needed to thrive in the face of constant disruption, particularly within the fast-transforming financial services industry.

Malaysia's financial sector, encompassing finance and insurance, is a driving force behind the nation's economic prosperity. This sector is not only a major contributor to the national gross domestic product (GDP), with an estimated 6.7% in 2023 and a projected growth of 4.3% in 2024, but also a significant source of employment, boasting more than 168,000 workers as of early 2024. Hence, to sustain this upward trajectory and ensure future success, cultivating a highly skilled and adaptable talent pool is paramount. The Future Skills Framework emerges as a crucial roadmap for achieving this goal.

The FSF, a collaborative effort spearheaded by the financial services sector itself, serves as a single, authoritative reference point for understanding the evolving landscape of job roles and in-demand skills over the next three years, Paul Low, Aii's CEO said. "The framework provides detailed career development pathways for those currently working in or aspiring to join the sector, along with targeted capability building programmes designed to equip individuals with essential skills."

Recognising that each financial institution has its unique needs, the FSF is designed for customisation, empowering organisations to tailor it to their specific requirements. It also serves as a valuable tool for validating and refining strategic planning, ensuring alignment with an organisation's vision, values, operating models, and required skills. To maintain its relevance in a dynamic job market, the framework will be regularly updated.

In line with Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM)'s Financial Sector Blueprint (2022-2026), the FSF plays a key role in identifying emerging jobs and in-demand skills, facilitating effective skills matching, promoting lifelong skills mastery, clarifying career pathways, developing a high-quality capacity building ecosystem, and ensuring seamless integration with national skills initiatives. "By embracing the FSF, Malaysia's financial sector can confidently navigate the future of work, fostering a more robust and adaptable workforce ready to meet the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead" Low pointed out.

While the specific origins of a universally recognised "Future Skills Framework" are difficult to pinpoint, Humeirah Khan, Aii's Director of Professional Standards, said the concept itself has deep roots in global workforce development initiatives.

In the Malaysian context, the framework emerged as a direct response to the government's vision for a high-income, knowledge-based economy, as outlined in national strategies like the Malaysian Economic Transformation Programme and successive national development plans, Humeirah added. "These blueprints identified a pressing need to bridge the skills gap and prepare the workforce for an increasingly digital and innovation-driven future."

The financial services sector, a key pillar of the Malaysian economy, became an early adopter and strong proponent of the FSF. Recognising the seismic shifts brought about by fintech, artificial intelligence, and evolving consumer expectations, the industry recognised that future competitiveness hinged on a workforce equipped with both technical prowess and essential soft skills. This realisation quickly spurred collaborative efforts between government agencies, industry bodies and training providers to define, develop, and nurture the skills critical for success in the future of finance.

"The central bank actively supports initiatives that encourage greater participation of women, youth, and individuals from diverse backgrounds, fostering a more representative and dynamic workforce."
- Humeirah

Humeirah: BNM, the nation's central bank, has also been a pivotal force in championing the FSF within the Malaysian financial services sector.

BNM, the nation's central bank, has also been a pivotal force in championing the FSF within the Malaysian financial services sector, Humeirah pointed out. It also actively fosters a collaborative ecosystem by engaging with financial institutions, industry associations, and training providers, encouraging dialogue, knowledge sharing, and the development of targeted training programmes that address emerging skill needs. As a driver of innovation, BNM is at the forefront of promoting cutting-edge approaches to talent development, including those leveraging technology for upskilling and reskilling, such as online learning platforms, virtual reality simulations, and data analytics training.

Remarkably, BNM also champions inclusivity and diversity within the financial sector, recognising the importance of drawing upon the talents of all Malaysians. "The central bank actively supports initiatives that encourage greater participation of women, youth, and individuals from diverse backgrounds, fostering a more representative and dynamic workforce," Humeirah said.

The Urgency: A Race Against Time in a Rapidly Evolving Landscape

The need to implement the FSF within Malaysia's financial services sector is not just important; it's urgent, Low said matter-of-factly. "We are in a race against time, facing a confluence of powerful forces reshaping the industry at an unprecedented pace," Low added. "Rapid technological advancements, particularly in areas like artificial intelligence, blockchain, and cloud computing, are revolutionising traditional business models, demanding a workforce adept at harnessing these tools to remain competitive."

Simultaneously, the financial services landscape is also, at the same time, becoming increasingly globalised, intensifying competition from both regional and international players. To thrive in this environment, Low said a highly skilled workforce is paramount. "Moreover, consumer demands are evolving rapidly, with demands for personalised, seamless, and digitally driven financial services adding on to the already high pressure within the industry to meet these needs," he said.

Meeting these expectations requires a workforce equipped not only with technical prowess but also with strong communication, problem-solving, and customer service skills. Failure to adapt risks job displacement as automation and digitisation reshape job roles within finance. The FSF offers a vital lifeline, providing a roadmap for upskilling and reskilling initiatives that can mitigate this risk and ensure a smooth transition to the future of work. By embracing the FSF now, Malaysia's financial services sector can position itself for sustainable growth, enhanced competitiveness, and a future where technology empowers rather than disrupts. "The time for action is not tomorrow, it is now," Low said, pointing to the plans Aii has already laid out to take the Malaysian insurance industry forward (see Cover Story).

The Future Skills Framework: Reshaping the Landscape of Malaysian Insurance

The FSF is not a one-size-fits-all solution; it's a dynamic blueprint adaptable to the unique needs of different sectors. In the context of the Malaysian insurance industry, the FSF acts as a catalyst for transformation, pushing for a new breed of insurance professionals equipped to navigate a future defined by technological disruption, evolving consumer expectations, and a rapidly changing risk landscape.

"We can see on the horizon that the Malaysian insurance industry is ushering in an era of digitally adept, customer-centric, and ethically grounded professionals," Low added. "The FSF acknowledges the critical need to bridge the skills gap in our rapidly digitising world. It stresses data literacy and analytics, urging insurance professionals to embrace data as a tool for assessing risk, personalising policies, and detecting fraud."

"As such, strong communication, active listening, and empathy remain crucial in building lasting customer relationships..."
- Humeirah

Digital fluency, encompassing everything from online platforms and mobile applications to artificial intelligence (AI) and blockchain, is no longer optional but essential, and the FSF encourages the development of skills needed to navigate these technologies effectively. Furthermore, as the industry becomes increasingly reliant on data and digital infrastructure, cybersecurity awareness is paramount, and the FSF promotes training to identify and mitigate cyber threats, safeguarding sensitive customer information.

Beyond technical skills, Humeirah said, the FSF aims to elevate professionalism and customer-centricity within the industry. It recognises the fast-changing role of insurance professionals – moving away from transactional interactions towards becoming trusted financial advisers. This demands a deeper understanding of financial products, risk management strategies, and the ability to provide personalised advice. "As such, strong communication, active listening, and empathy remain crucial in building lasting customer relationships, and the FSF emphasizes these interpersonal skills as vital components of a customer-centric approach,” Humeirah said.

In an industry as dynamic as insurance, agility and adaptability are essential, and the FSF encourages a growth mindset, adaptability to change, and continuous learning to stay ahead of the curve, Low added. In addition, the FSF also reinforces the importance of ethical conduct, transparency, and responsible business practices, recognising that public trust is the bedrock of the insurance industry.

FSF promotes continuous professional development in regulatory knowledge, ensuring professionals remain informed about evolving regulations and compliance requirements, Humeirah pointed out. “By embracing the FSF, the Malaysian insurance industry can anticipate a workforce that is not only tech-savvy and data-driven but also deeply customer-centric, operating with the highest standards of integrity, transparency, and compliance,” she said. This holistic approach to skills development promises to reshape the industry, fostering greater efficiency, personalised service, and unwavering ethical conduct.

The FSF for the Malaysian insurance industry goes beyond simply acquiring new skills; it’s about cultivating a culture of continuous learning, adaptability, and customer-centricity. This transformation is essential for building a robust, trustworthy, and future-ready sector that can meet the evolving needs of Malaysian consumers and businesses. “To thrive in the coming years, the industry must embrace digital transformation on multiple fronts,” Low remarked simply. This would include modernising legacy IT systems, developing seamless digital distribution channels, and harnessing the power of data analytics for personalised offerings and improved customer service.

“Strong communication, active listening, and empathy remain crucial in building lasting customer relationships, and the FSF emphasizes these interpersonal skills as vital components of a customer-centric approach.”
- Humeirah

Equally important is cultivating a future-ready workforce, Low added. “Investing in upskilling and reskilling opportunities for current employees is crucial, as is attracting tech talent by offering competitive salaries, benefits, and opportunities for growth. Fostering a culture of continuous learning within the industry is critical to navigating the ever-changing landscape of insurance.”

Furthermore, re-imagining customer experience is critical. This involves leveraging data and technology to offer personalised products and services, providing a frictionless digital experience across all touchpoints, and building trust and transparency regarding data privacy.

Also, the industry must adapt to evolving risks, including bolstering cybersecurity expertise, developing innovative products and services that address climate change and promote sustainability, and staying ahead of the curve in understanding the implications of emerging technologies. By embracing these changes, the Malaysian insurance industry can ensure its continued relevance and effectiveness in a rapidly evolving world, Low said.

By proactively addressing these areas, the Malaysian insurance industry can position itself for a future defined by innovation, customer-centricity, and sustainable growth. The FSF provides a valuable roadmap for this journey, but it’s up to the industry to embrace change and take decisive action to secure its future success. “Adopting the FSF is undoubtedly a significant undertaking for the Malaysian insurance industry, requiring a concerted effort and strategic planning across the entire sector,” Low stated plainly. “While the task is substantial, it’s essential to view it not as an insurmountable hurdle but as a necessary investment in the industry’s long-term sustainability and success.”

Humeirah: Beyond technical skills, the FSF aims to elevate professionalism and customer-centricity within the industry.

“To thrive in the coming years, the industry must embrace digital transformation on multiple fronts.”
- Low

The FSF presents a significant challenge to the Malaysian insurance industry, requiring a transformation that extends beyond individual skill development to encompass a complete cultural shift. This industry-wide change demands embracing technology, data-driven decision-making, and a customer-centric approach. Achieving this vision necessitates substantial financial investments from insurance companies, particularly in modernising their IT systems, developing digital platforms, and implementing comprehensive training programmes. Equally important is overcoming resistance to change and fostering a culture of continuous learning at all levels within the industry.

While the journey towards fully realising the FSF will be gradual, immediate action can be taken, Humeirah told the iN Magazine. Identifying skill gaps, partnering with educational institutions, and piloting digital initiatives are crucial first steps. Within the next three to five years, significant progress can be made in upgrading IT infrastructure, developing digital distribution channels, and upskilling a substantial portion of the workforce. However, achieving a fully digitally fluent, data-driven, and customer-centric insurance industry, as envisioned by the FSF, will likely take five to 10 years of sustained effort and adaptation.

Several factors can hasten the pace of this adoption. Government support and regulation play a crucial role, with supportive policies, incentives for upskilling, and a regulatory environment that encourages innovation potentially accelerating the process. Industry collaboration is also key, as sharing best practices, collaborating on training initiatives, and fostering a spirit of cooperation among insurance companies can facilitate a smoother transition. Also, consumer demand for digital, personalised, and seamless insurance experiences will further drive the industry towards FSF adoption.

“Investing in upskilling and reskilling opportunities for current employees is crucial, as is attracting tech talent by offering competitive salaries, benefits, and opportunities for growth.”
- Low

And while the path to fully embracing the FSF is significant and will require time, the Malaysian insurance industry cannot afford to delay. A proactive, strategic, and collaborative approach is essential for successful navigation of this transformation, ensuring the industry’s continued relevance, competitiveness, and ability to thrive in the future of financial services.

Championing Quality, Rewarding Excellence

To say the life insurance industry in Asia is undergoing a profound transformation, is a gross understatement. Gone are the days of purely transactional models, replaced by a growing demand for client-centricity, unwavering professionalism, and sustainable growth. In a bold move to elevate the life insurance industry across Asia, a groundbreaking initiative is taking root at the Asian Institute of Insurance (Aii) – the Asian Quality Business (AQB) Initiative.

This ambitious programme, spearheaded by the newly minted Aii, seeks to resolutely cultivate a new generation of high-performing, client-centric insurance professionals and leaders who will serve as role models for the entire region. “With its unwavering focus on professionalism, ethics, and customer satisfaction, the AQB Initiative is strategically poised to redefine the landscape of life insurance in Asia,” Fiona Chew, Aii’s Chief Business Officer told the iN Magazine recently.

At the heart of the AQB Initiative beats a powerful, resonant theme – insurance professionals must be completely client-focused for a secure and sustainable future. “This mantra is not just a tagline,” Chew succinctly put it. “It’s a deeply ingrained philosophy reflecting a keen understanding of the evolving needs of Asian consumers.” The AQB Initiative recognises the critical role insurance professionals play in securing the financial well-being of individuals and families, advocating for a future where insurance is viewed not as a mere transaction, but as a vital partnership built on trust and mutual benefit.

The AQB Initiative goes beyond mere rhetoric. The Initiative comes with a flagship event – the prestigious Asian Quality Business Awards & Symposium – which provides a tangible platform for recognising and celebrating the industry’s cornerstone: agents and agency managers who champion quality life insurance business adoption throughout Asia. “This isn’t just another industry awards night or gathering,” Chew pointed out. “It’s a unique opportunity for the elite of Asia’s life insurance professionals to connect, collaborate, and learn from each other, fostering an environment where best practices are shared, and innovation thrives.”

Why Participate?

The AQB initiative offers a wealth of benefits for insurance professionals at all stages of their careers. “It is a golden opportunity for industry professionals to immerse in the transformative benefits of embracing the AQB ethos,” Chew said. Here’s why participating in the AQB Awards & Symposium is a strategic investment the future of all insurance professionals:

- Distinguish Yourself in a Crowded Market: In a competitive landscape, differentiation is key. Receiving this prestigious, pan-Asian award instantly sets you apart, marking you as a true champion of quality and a leader in your field.

“With its unwavering focus on professionalism, ethics, and customer satisfaction, the AQB Initiative is strategically poised to redefine the landscape of life insurance in Asia.”
- Chew

It serves as a cornerstone for sustainable agency growth, bolstering your brand credibility and attracting discerning clients who prioritise quality service and comprehensive risk management.

- Make a Tangible Difference in the Lives of Millions: Become a driving force in shaping a more robust and inclusive insurance ecosystem across Asia. By promoting greater insurance adoption, you are directly contributing to the financial stability of individuals, families, and communities, and in the process, creating a ripple effect of positive change.
- Attract Top Talent and Cultivate a Culture of Excellence: Position yourself as an employer of choice for ambitious, high-performing life planners who are naturally drawn to a culture of excellence, continuous professional development, and unwavering client-centricity.
- Drive Industry Innovation, Shape the Future of Insurance: Join a vibrant, dynamic community of like-minded professionals who are passionate about elevating the industry. Together, you’ll set new benchmarks, share best practices, and drive innovation, shaping the future of insurance in Asia.

A Robust Evaluation Framework

The AQB Awards stand out from other industry accolades due to their rigorous and holistic evaluation process. It’s not just about sales figures; it’s about the value you deliver. Agency managers and agents are assessed on three key performance indicators, ensuring a well-rounded evaluation that considers both quality and quantity:

- Persistency: The Lifeblood of Client Relationships: This metric goes beyond short-term gains, reflecting the long-term value you provide to clients and the strength of the relationships you cultivate.
- Cases: Expanding Your Reach, Amplifying Your Impact: This indicator measures the breadth and depth of your impact, showcasing your ability to provide tailored insurance solutions to a diverse clientele.
- Sum Assured: Securing Financial Futures, Providing Peace of Mind: This factor assesses the tangible financial security you provide to clients through the insurance policies you secure, highlighting your commitment to safeguarding their futures.

“The judging of the individual’s performance is completely objective,” Chew said. “As such, participants can be assured that they are evaluated based on the numbers they bring in. You cannot be any more impartial than this. This will indeed make these awards much, much more coveted.”

By focusing on these key performance indicators, the AQB Awards recognise individuals who are not only successful in their own right, but also dedicated to the overall health, sustainability, and ethical growth of the life insurance industry in Asia.

“The AQB Initiative is more than just a programme,” Chew put it emphatically. “It’s a movement! It’s a call to action for insurance professionals across Asia to embrace a client-centric approach, prioritise quality business practices, and work together to build a more secure and sustainable future for all.”
